

MORGENTHAU NOT TO TAKE WAR POST

Ambassador to Turkey
Back for 60 Days' Rest
After 28 Months.

WARNED AT PIER BY LANSING'S NOTE

Glad He Found Himself Able to Serve Nation, He Tells Reception Committee.

Henry Morgenthau, American Ambassador to Turkey, returned yesterday on the Frederik VIII on a sixty days' leave of absence, his first vacation in twenty-eight months. He was met at Quarantine by his wife and daughters and a committee of welcome appointed by the Mayor and taken on the revenue cutter Manhattan to Pier A, where a general reception was tendered him.

A special messenger was waiting for the ambassador at the pier with a letter from Secretary Lansing warning him to be guarded in what he said about conditions in Turkey. Mr. Morgenthau was able to explain, however, that the first period of comparative quiet in Turkey for many months had made it possible for him to take a rest and get in closer touch with American affairs.

Mr. Morgenthau spent the day with his family at his home, 30 West Seventieth Street, and left on the midnight train for Washington.

Won't Succeed Garrison.

The ambassador's first act after he had clambered down to the cutter from the deck of the Scandinavian-American liner was to greet the members of his family who had come down the bay. He was then welcomed by Special Deputy Collector H. C. Stuart, representing Dudley Field Malone, Collector of the Port, and Cleveland H. Dodge, who headed the Mayor's reception committee of forty. He was accompanied by his son, Henry Morgenthau, Jr., who has been acting as his secretary.

Mr. Morgenthau has been mentioned as a possible successor of Lindley M. Garrison as Secretary of War. He declined emphatically yesterday that there was any likelihood of his taking the cabinet place.

"There is not the slightest chance of my succeeding Mr. Garrison," he said. "My work is cut out for me and I shall stick to my post."

"When I first went to Turkey," the ambassador continued, "I had on the American interests to look after, principally missionaries. Later I took the views under my wing, and finally I spread out the American flag like a large umbrella. As one nation after another came under its folds it was my duty to see that no one appropriated more than its fair share."

"I have had the unusual privilege of rendering some service to my country," he said. "I have attained to it largely to the cooperation of Turkish officials and the help of W. W. Peek, treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions in Constantinople, and the head of the American mission. He worked with me fifteen hours at a stretch. My wife, while she was there, was also of the greatest assistance to me."

"If this warm reception is any indication of the way our people recognize public service it should encourage other men to enter it."

At the pier Mr. Morgenthau was met by his three daughters, Mrs. M. J. Fox, Mrs. M. J. Fox, and Mrs. M. J. Fox, who opened the ceremony for him twenty-eight months ago. A large number of men well known in politics and business greeted the ambassador in Dock Commissioner Smith's office.

Cleveland H. Dodge, president of Roberts College, introduced him as "our beloved friend, Henry Morgenthau, who has proved himself the peer of the greatest diplomats in Europe, and whose resourcefulness and tact have won the applause of the whole civilized world."

"I expected a formal reception," said Mr. Morgenthau. "This sincere welcome is touching. My task has been peculiar. I couldn't have filled it without the preparation given me by my business associates here. I consider New York City the greatest university of the world."

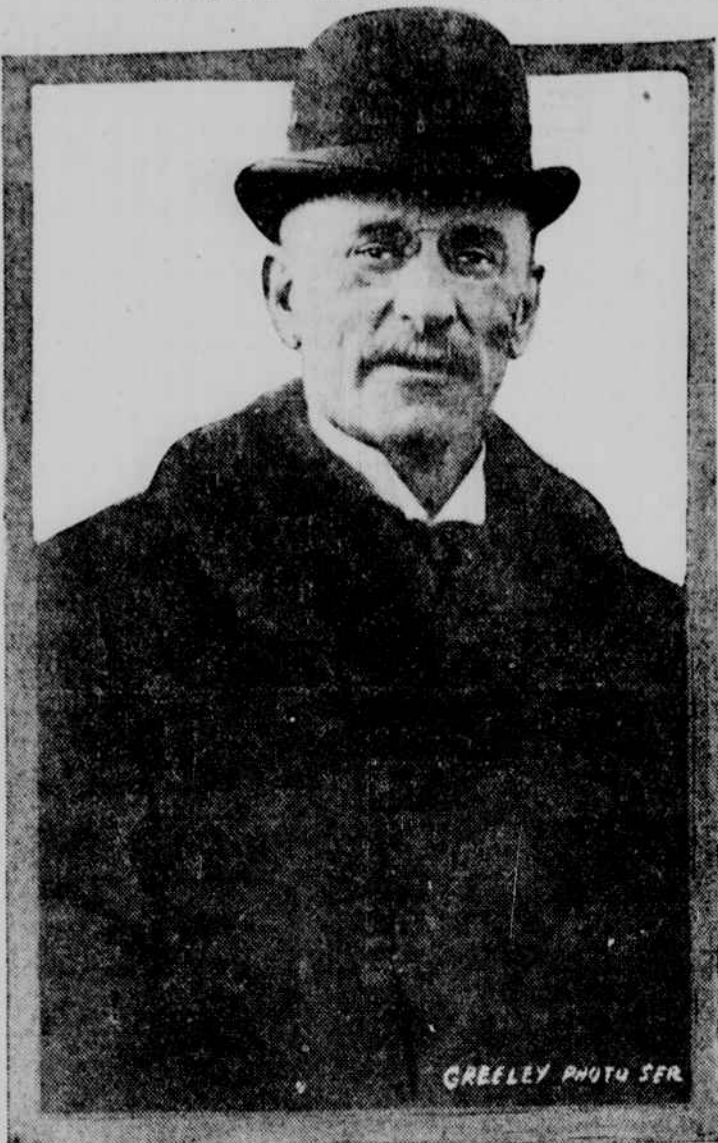

Diplomats No Different.

Speaking of his association with foreign diplomats, he continued: "People in the diplomatic world are no different than you. When I felt that I needed moral encouragement I gazed at the pictures of Lincoln and President Willard in my private office and found inspiration."

"Before I left Constantinople I executed definite guarantees that no harm would come to my children. It has been wonderful to feel that I had the United States and a magnificent President back of me. I could talk longer, but I think it is better to be brief and make no mistakes."

A formal welcome will probably be

HENRY MORGENTHAU.

ROUGH PASSAGE KILLS
TWO ON NEW YORK

Woman, Exhausted by Sickness,
Dies, and Coal Buries a Stoker.

Sheathed with ice so that she looked like a phantom ship, the American liner New York arrived yesterday after weathering storms so violent that they were the indirect cause of two deaths on board. The ship left Liverpool on Lincoln's Birthday and completed her patriotic run by docking on the anniversary of Washington's birth.

Few of the 308 passengers ventured on deck during the voyage, and at most of the meals the saloon stewards had only one another for company.

Mrs. S. A. Wallace, of Winchester, Mass., who was returning from England with her husband, an official in the General Electric Company, died Sunday from heart failure and exhaustion. She was taken ill when the ship first struck heavy weather, and became steadily worse. Her body was brought home for burial.

Another death due to the storm was that of a stoker, John Hargrave. He had just opened a port bunker containing fifty tons of coal when the ship was struck by a mountainous wave and heeled far over to starboard. The coal poured out, burying the stoker completely. He was dead when found and was buried at sea Wednesday.

Edward Weinacht, formerly connected with the Adams Express Company in this city, returned on the New York from London, where, in January, 1914, he established the International Transportation Company. He was arrested on a charge of trading with enemies of Great Britain, but was quickly exonerated when it was established that he was an American, acting in good faith. He was defended by H. F. Dickens, a son of the famous author.

WIFE LOSES HIS LEGACY

Nelson Planned to Buy Farm Until He Learned $3,000 Had Flown.

Dreams of milking cows, feeding pigs, putting the cat out and a general life of ease on a farm exploded with a bang last night for Carl A. Nelson, a machinist, of 805 Sixth Street, Brooklyn.

Sunday his wife, Mrs. Helen Nelson, journeyed to Binghamton, N. Y., to collect $3,000 left him by his father. She was to go to Pennsylvania from there to buy a farm Nelson had admired. Taken ill in Binghamton, Mrs. Nelson changed her mind and yesterday started back home. In her baggage she carried the $3,000.

She arrived in New York and through confusion took an uptown subway train. Stopping on the Fourteenth Street station platform, she reached in her bag for a handkerchief, discovered it open and the money gone.

The police are looking for it.

PLANS TO DOCK AT NORTH POLE

Captain Bernier Thinks He Can Sail Almost to Top of World.

Captain Joseph E. Bernier, a veteran Arctic explorer, announced yesterday that early in July he would head an expedition for the North Pole. On the sail auxiliary steamer Guide he will start from Quebec, equipped with all modern appliances for exploring, including aeroplanes and motion picture cameras. An opportunity will be afforded a dozen sportsmen to accompany the party to hunt big game.

Before leaving New York yesterday for his home on the St. Lawrence River Captain Bernier, who while in the service of the Dominion of Canada explored and charted much of Baffin's Bay, outlined his plans.

"I believe that a new route may be found to the pole," he declared, "and that it leads through the open, moving that is caused by the southern Japan Current. This route, if followed, should lead north of Wrangel Island." Captain Bernier added that he expected to find open water in Melville Strait, Lancaster Sound, the lower part of Smith Sound and north of Baffin's Bay, making it easy to reach a position from which a dash for the pole would be a comparatively simple matter.

"If there are any sportsmen who would like some real shooting and care to accompany me for three to six months I shall be glad to have them. On my last trip to Baffin's Bay I got 200 polar bears alone, and there are lots of deer, caribou, seals and walrus. The wolves abound on Melville Island, and there are plenty of foxes to trap. Musk ox shooting is capital sport, and salmon abound in almost every river emptying into Baffin's Bay."

The Guide has made other trips to Arctic waters and behaved creditably. She is of 150 tons register and is equipped with a 100-horsepower engine. While on the Guide the explorer has mapped many islands and sounds of the Arctic Archipelago.

THIEF LOCKS UP CASHIER

Drives Official and Workman Into Vault; Then Steals $700.

Minneapolis, Feb. 22.—A robber locked the cashier and a workman in the vault of the Camden Park State Bank here today, secured $700 and escaped.

The bank was closed on account of the holiday. The robber tapped at the window and the cashier admitted him, only to be driven with a carpenter, who was doing some repair work, into the vault. The carpenter found a chisel and pried open the lock.

Several weeks ago the same bank was robbed by three bandits.

SUFFRAGISTS WIN ALBANY SKIRMISH

New Referendum Bill Favorably Reported by Assembly Committee.

SPEAKER THREATENS DEFEAT ON FLOOR

Women to Concentrate Efforts on Lower House—Result There to Govern Senators.

(From a Staff Correspondent of The Tribune.)

Albany, Feb. 22.—The Whitney-Brereton suffrage amendment was reported from the Assembly Judiciary Committee today, much to the joy of a throng of suffragists, who had come here to attend a hearing on the Slater bill in the Senate. The vote in committee was 11 to 1, Assemblyman Schimmel, of Manhattan, voting in the negative.

Speaker Sweet tried hard to keep the amendment from coming out of the committee, and when Chairman Knight told him that the committee was overwhelmingly in its favor he declared he would have it defeated on the floor of the Assembly.

The suffragists' luck was not quite so good in the Senate. Cheered by their success in the Assembly, Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse and Mr. Whitehouse, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw and a score of workers stormed the Judiciary Committee room in the Senate. After many assaults they extracted a promise from Senator Walters, chairman, that definite action on the suffrage amendment would be taken by the committee in two weeks.

Senator Walters delighted the suffragists by telling them there was a disposition on the part of the committee to report the bill, but that it had been decided to wait two weeks to give sentiment either for or against it an opportunity to crystallize. If, in the meantime, the amendment is passed by the Assembly, favorable action will be taken by the Senate committee. If it is defeated in the Assembly that will end it so far as the Senate is concerned.

To Concentrate on Assembly.

The suffragists seemed pleased with the statement of Senator Walters and went home determined to bring about passage of the amendment by the Assembly. From now on their efforts will be concentrated on the lower house, because if it is successful there it is practically certain to be successful in the Senate. So pleased were the women at the action of the Assembly Judiciary Committee that they held a meeting in its room and adopted a vote of thanks to Chairman Knight.

Earlier in the day Senator Walters had made a decidedly bad impression on the suffragists by asking if the women were willing to accept the Slater bill in preference to the Whitney-Brereton amendment. This was during a hearing on the Slater bill, which gives women the right to vote for Presidential Electors. Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch had just finished a strong argument for the Slater bill, which, she said, represented what she felt like characterizing as a "change of venue," when Senator Walters said: "Will you accept this bill as a change of venue for the other bill?"

Mrs. Blatch hesitated and suggested that Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, chairman of the State Woman Suffrage Association, was best qualified to answer.

Whitney-Brereton Bill Preferred.

"I am chairman of the New York State Woman Suffrage Association," Mrs. Whitehouse said. "Last year we had 2,600 officers and 200,000 workers, all voluntary for the suffrage amendment to the constitution. On behalf of them I will answer the Senator's question by saying 'No, we will not accept this bill in preference to the Whitney-Brereton bill.'"

The question of Senator Walters caused much concern to the suffragists. Lest there be any misunderstanding as to the attitude of the members of the State Suffrage Association, Mrs. Whitehouse, after the hearing, said:

"When Senator Walters asked if the New York State Woman Suffrage party would accept the Slater bill for Presidential suffrage in place of the Whitney-Brereton bill, which we have been supporting for a resubmission of the question to the electorate, I was forced to say 'No.'"

"We are, however, unreservedly in favor of the bill for Presidential suffrage, although our first and greatest interest is in a new referendum for complete suffrage. No suffragists would refuse any shade or degree of suffrage. On that question all organizations agree."

Mrs. Laidlaw was incensed at Senator Walters' question, which she declared to be "a disingenuous act to play one bill against the other."

Other Suffragists Angered.

The other suffragists, who filled the Senate chamber, were equally incensed. Mrs. Everett P. Wheeler spoke for the anti-suffragists. Miss Chittenden and Miss Price declared that the results of the election last year showed that the voters of the state were opposed to woman suffrage. Mr. Wheeler made a legal argument against the bill.

WOMEN WIN IN MARYLAND

Suffrage Amendment Passes Senate; Goes to House Today.

Annapolis, Feb. 22.—Woman suffrage won a victory in the Senate today by a vote of 15 to 10. The measure is pending in the House, and is a special order for consideration to-morrow.

If passed by the House and approved by the Governor, the question will be submitted to the voters of Maryland in the form of a constitutional amendment.

OSBORNE FAILS TO ESCAPE TRIAL

Court Refuses to Quash Immorality and Perjury Indictments.

Poughkeepsie, Feb. 22.—Justice Morschauer decided against Thomas Mott Osborne to-night in his demurrer to the indictment charging immorality and mismanagement, and on his motion to set aside that indictment and the indictment charging perjury as having been based on illegal and incompetent evidence and in violation of his constitutional rights.

Justice Morschauer, however, strikes from the mismanagement indictment two counts, neither of them important, and leaves a sixth count, charging immorality, to be disposed of before a jury. The count charging perjury is a first, charging failure to be on duty more than four days a week, and that count which charged failure to comply with prison regulations and report assaults and immorality cases to the head of the Prison Department.

Justice Morschauer holds that the perjury indictment and the four remaining counts of the mismanagement indictment must stand, despite the fact that much of the mass of evidence presented against Mr. Osborne was illegal and incompetent.

"In this case," says he, "there was much illegal and incompetent evidence received by the grand jury, but in analyzing and examining the proof that was adduced before the grand jury I cannot say that they were not justified in finding the indictment."

The decision of Justice Morschauer was not expected until later in the week. District Attorney Weeks having failed to file the answering affidavit without which he declared yesterday, he would assume that the charges made by Mr. Osborne in his moving papers were correct.

It is probable that as a result of this early decision an order for 200 talesmen to report at White Plains will issue to-morrow or Friday, and that Mr. Osborne will go to trial on Monday.

LITTLE WHITE DOG TO DIE

Policeman, Boy and Girl Are Bitten and Accuse Mongrel.

A little white mongrel affectionately wagged his tail in the East Sixty-seventh Street police station early last evening and tried to give the impression that he was a candidate for the dog heaven.

Policeman John Dougherty, running through Sixty-third Street to a fire in the apartment of Benjamin Costa, at 412, found his progress impeded when a little white dog, he said, sank its teeth into Dougherty's right leg. Dougherty yelled and the dog departed. Dougherty gave chase and back of a house at First Avenue, captured the dog and took him to the station.

Then the telephone rang and Dr. Salsberg, of Flower Hospital, reported that he had been called to attend Ellen Poole, a six-year-old girl, at 412 East Sixty-fourth Street. She had been bitten on the left leg by a dog. The little white dog was again blamed.

Last night the little white dog was taken to the pound, still wagging his tail. Policeman Dougherty, after surveying a torn trouser leg, made out a report on the Costa apartment fire.

"The loss was slight," read the report, "to everybody but me and the little white dog."

LAFAYETTE DODGES RAIDERS

French Banker, on Secret Mission, Arrives on Liner.

The French liner Lafayette, which arrived yesterday after a stormy passage, was warned by wireless from Gibraltar when she was leaving Bordeaux that a ship in the vicinity had reported being chased by a German raider. Captain Koch relayed the news to the Chicago, of the same line, then completing her voyage from New York, but saw no sign of the reported raider. It was reported in New York that the Chicago had been pursued, but officers on the Lafayette denied this.

Among the passengers was Viscount de Breteuil, a French banker, who came to the United States some time ago to help arrange the Anglo-French loan. He would not discuss the business which brings him this time.

"DREAM OF HEAVEN" HER GUIDE FOR 7 YEARS

Waltz Memory Kept Mrs. Bishop
Hunting for Girlhood Partner.

"A Dream of Heaven," that waltz so popular a half dozen years ago, always brings to my mind Phil Grant and the Cornell junior prom of 1909. It was there that I first danced that waltz. Phil was a Delta Kappa Epsilon frat man then, and I, just a girl of eighteen, was his guest at the prom."

Mrs. Helen Walton Bishop was explaining reluctantly yesterday at the Hotel Biltmore how, after being separated for seven years, she had accidentally met Phil again. This time her gallant college prom host was a penniless steward on the West India liner Pastores.

The seven years had taken the then Miss Helen Walton, of Detroit, through matrimony, the Titanic disaster and a divorce suit, and left her the attractive Mrs. Bishop, of the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, with $100,000 a year alimony. But Grant had found them seven lean years. He had left college, abandoned his home, sowed oats along Broadway, reaped the whirlwind, and withdrew within the guise of a steamship steward to lose himself, even from himself, if possible.

"A Dream of Heaven," explained Mrs. Bishop, "was not the rollicking, tiresome tango type of waltz that now takes two feet, two hands, two eyes and one's entire brain to dance. It was the kind that you could dance with your eyes shut and forget everything—everything but the music and your partner."

"After that year I lost trace of Phil, and so did his mother, but I promised her that if ever I found him I would send him back to her. Since then he has taken two feet, two hands, two eyes and one's entire brain to dance. It was the kind that you could dance with your eyes shut and forget everything—everything but the music and your partner."

"I have watched faces by the hour, hoping to see him. And to think that I should find him in a narrow corridor of the Pastores!"

"I am terribly sorry it got into the papers, but I am happy that I was able to send him back to his mother. I know his mother, and I know how she longed for him. He is going to make good now—I am sure of it."
